CITY IS HURRYING PREPARATIONS FOR PAVING HIGHWAY 15

Leminwah-st Pavement Will Be 24 Feet Wide—Order Improvements In

Plans and specifications for the paving of Lemnawah-st, last unpaved portion of state trunk highway 15 in Appleton, will be completed next week, so that the common council will be in a position shortly to advertise for contractors proposals.

The concrete pavement will extend from Brukeet to Second-ave, three blocks, or a total distance of 1,500 feet. The county has appropriated $120,000.10 in county aid for an 18-foot pavement whatever width the appropriation will allow. The city of Appleton will extend the width up to 24 feet with concrete curbs. It is estimated that the city's share may be approximately $6,000, thus making the entire project about $18,000. Two-thirds of the city's share will be assessed against the owners of the abutting properties.

All of the property owners have been sent written notices to the effect that all improvements such as sewer, water and gas extensions should be made at once. None of the property owners have thus far complied with the order, but the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power company is making arrangements for extension of gas pipes.

The board of public works has been instructed by the city council to hasten the project and it is probable that the city will make the extensions itself and charge the cost to the property owners.

OPPEGARD'S DAUGHTER IS INJURED IN ACCIDENT

Lorraine Oppgaard, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Oppgaard, income tax assessor for Lincoln and Marathon-ces, formerly of Appleton, was seriously hurt Sunday evening when she was struck by an automobile driven by Walter Kurth at Wausau. She was taken to a hospital, where she was found suffering from internal injuries. Later pneumonia developed and her condition became critical.

The little girl started to cross Third-st from the First National bank corner. The automobile was coming from the south and the girl apparently did not see it. Kurth applied his brakes but the automobile skidded for about 30 feet and could not be stopped in time to avoid knocking her down. She scrambled to her feet but almost at once collapsed.

Soldier Bonus Bond Issue Is Almost Paid

When the $165,204 allotted by the county board for payment of principal and interest of highway and soldier bonus bonds this year is paid, the county will have wiped out the entire soldier bonus bond issue of $167,185.14, leaving $864,000 to pay in highway bonds and $280,650 in highway bond interest.

This is brought out in a statement of John E. Hantchel, county clerk, to the county board. The last payment on the soldier bonus bond issue scheduled for this year, amounted to $47,195.14 in principal and $2,359.76 in interest.

The total amount of highway bonds maturing this year is $70,000 in principal and $45,650 in interest. There will still remain to be paid $60,000 of $700,000 bond issue maturing in 1926; $50,000 of another $700,000 issue maturing in 1926, and the entire issues of $272,000 maturing in 1930, $272,000 maturing in 1934 and $150,000 maturing in 1937.

SUPREME COURT DECISION HELPS HIGHWAY BUILDING

Highway improvement in Wisconsin will be materially benefited by the recent decision of the Supreme court sustaining the legality of a part of the state highway law passed at the last session of the legislature which provided that railroad companies should bear the cost of paving on their right of way where relocations are made, according to the Good Roads magazine.

The cost of paving the highway crossing will run from $400 to $5,000 depending upon the conditions. It is estimated that the cost of paving approximately 1,000 railroad crossings on the state trunk highway system would run to $500,000.

"Most of the railroads have resisted attempts to compel them to pay the cost of paving on sections of highway within the railroad right of way at grade crossings," the article says. "A test suit was brought by the state against the C. M. & St. P. Ry. company, which has resisted such payments. In the interim the commission, in order to avoid delays, has gone ahead and paved the crossings and has advised county officials to do likewise. It is probable that claims will

PUT WATER SOFTENER IN INSURANCE-BLDG

Another step in installation of modern conveniences has been taken by the trustees of the Aid Association for Lutherans for the insurance-bldg. There is located on the premises a deep drilled well which supplies water for all the bubblers and lavatories in the building. But owing to the fact that the water is too "hard" for washing one's hands and face, a water softening plant is to be installed in the building.

Contract was let this week to Palke and Jones Chemical company of Hammond, Ind., to install a Zeolite softener. A means will be provided for allowing the water to pass through a mineral to "soften" the water. The arrangement will in no way affect the water for drinking purposes, but may improve it, according to William H. Zuehlke, who has the management of the building.

City water has been used for the boiler, since the well water contained too much lime for the purpose. The building will still be connected for use of city water in emergency and for fire protection.

500 LINE WILL IMPROVE ROADBED OF OLD W. AND N.

The road bed of the former Wisconsin & Northern road between Appleton and Crandon, which was acquired several years ago by the Soo line, is to be regraded and new ties will be laid this summer between Appleton and Grosham, a distance of 55 miles. The work will start at once and it will require the entire summer to complete it. It is understood heavy steel is eventually to be laid in anticipation of the operation of heavy trains.

be made against the railroads under the court's ruling to reimburse the state and the counties for such pavement work."

WET WEATHER SLOWS CITY STREET WORK

Drainage System Working Efficiently and Few Complaints Are Received

City street work is being uncomfortably delayed by an unusually wet spring. With some rain falling practically every 48 hours and sometimes 48 hours or even more in succession, it has been next to impossible for city street department crews to get started on graveling and cindering projects, let alone the regular street repair work.

The city engineer is anxious to get started on a number of projects, but is hampered. In consequence, the work in connection with the street paving and numbering program will be delayed. Installation of water mains by the water department also has been delayed frequently, and the soggy condition of the ground has left little opportunity for work in the parks.

Fortunately, in spite of the large volume of rainfall, the city drainage system seems to be working fairly well and only a few complaints have been made. These were mostly the result of artificial impediments made by some property owners and over which the street department has no control. Drainage work done by the city in one block last year at a cost of about $600 was made useless by the filling in of a low lot. To save the block from being inundated the city will have to spend considerably more money, it was said.

Warmth without Worry

WHEN you design your new home, you are planning for comfort without worry.

Your plumbing, your chimney, your fireplace, and, most important of all, your furnace, must function properly or you take little real comfort in your new home—and comfort is what you build for.

The HOME Hot Blast Heating Plant that will go into your new house is a real heating service.

It will be specially designed by factory experts to fit your new home; and when our crew of factory-trained workmen have finished the installation, the HOME Furnace will have been built into your house just as truly as the porticos, the dormers, or the sun room.

It may be months before snow flies; but you know beforehand that the HOME will heat your house just as surely as when, on the first October day, it actually begins to flood your living rooms day and night with cozy and healthful warmth.

In fact, we give you a five-year written bond to this effect signed by our general manager. This guarantees your comfort for five years; and the guarantee is backed by a financially-permanent and reliable corporation.

Read the ten HOME advantages at the right; then call up our local factory service branch, or write direct to Holland, Michigan. We will be glad to demonstrate conclusively the truth of these points.

Ask for our booklet, "Warmth Without Worry." It explains other HOME advantages.

THE BUSINESS OUTLOOK

Julius H. Barnes, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at the annual meeting of his organization at Cleveland, had considerable to say about the injurious effects of burdensome taxation upon business. He registered the disappointment of business, and in our opinion of the public generally, at the manner in which congress has addressed itself to revision of the tax laws. "Industry," said Barnes, "has evolved from its early reliance on manpower alone to its modern character of machine and power equipment, and, therefore, its increasing dependence on capital and credit, which government so intimately and vitally affects." Excessive taxation frightens investment capital away from industry. We have had plenty of proof of this within the last few years, and Mr. Mellon's analysis of capital withdrawal from productive enterprise and his tax proposal to encourage its return were the soundest features of his tax revision plan.

There has been some recession of business since early spring but the outlook is not unfavorable. Sound tax revision would have a great deal to do with clearing the skies and insuring better business in the fall and thereafter. In April $298,000,000 worth of new stocks and bonds were floated, compared with $305,000,000 in April last year. In the first three weeks of April the railroads of the country loaded and moved 2,620,318 cars of freight. This was slightly less than in the corresponding weeks of last year, but much ahead of 1922 and 1921. From the first of the year to April 20th, the railroads moved 142 cars of freight for every 141 a year ago in the corresponding period, and 120 in 1922 and 141 in 1921. Thus it will be seen that to date commerce and finance have held up very well.

The steel industry is reported to be operating about 80 to 85 per cent capacity, but in recent months its production was breaking previous records. Perhaps the uncertainties of the political situation have had some effect in slowing down buying, which was conservative, while the scandals unearthed at Washington doubtless produced some timidity. Nevertheless, business should be regarded as in a distinctly favorable condition, considering all of the factors that usually obtain in a presidential year. Business always runs in cycles, even in prosperous times. It is not unlike a man engaged in a long distance hike. He can walk fast just so long and then he has to stop and rest. The greater the production, the sooner it must slow down temporarily to permit the markets to fully absorb the output.

A great many small failures have taken place, but in the main they have weeded out inefficiency and unsoundly financed or managed undertakings. They will not produce any serious reactions. If the reparations problem is settled and Europe is started on the road to recovery under the scientific plan evolved by the Dawes commission it cannot fail to extend its good results to the United States by providing a larger market for our surplus production. We think the general opinion is that following what is to some extent a seasonal lull things will soon pick up and that the prospects for fall are excellent. Congress could improve the outlook materially if it would lay aside politics and consent to be guided in the matter of tax revision by the wise judgment of the president and his able secretary of the treasury.

THE PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS

The president of the United States has more power than any constitutional monarch in the world, and more power than most unconstitutional monarchs. He has more power than any prime minister, with the exception of Mussolini. The constitutional king has an indefinite tenure, terminable only by death, or breach of trust, while the president is elected for a specific term of four years; the prime minister may fall with his administration whenever he ceases to fulfill popular demands.

In the past ten years an insurgent spirit has been growing up among the people in all parts of the country, and especially in certain states and sections. This independent spirit is a real factor in government, and congress has not only displayed jealousy of its prerogatives, but has frequently, under both Democratic and Republican regimes, opposed the main policy of the president.

Through experience with modern problems we appear to be working out a new idea with regard to the position and power of the president and the relationship between the White house and the capitol. The president is becoming a proponent of issues and a defender of principles, and he often addresses to the people interpretations of his policy.

Actually, it makes no difference whether the power of the president is curtailed by opposition from congress, provided the executive and legislative branches of the government are competent, sincere and fair. Honest difference of opinion generally leads to satisfactory compromise. Party alignments are as a rule the best means of securing results, because governmental responsibility is definite. In the forthcoming election it should be borne in mind that congress is no less important than the presidency in the conduct of our government. There would be less dissatisfaction with congress if this truth were realized and taken more seriously.

AIR MAIL SERVICE

After the post office department demonstrated, at much expense and enterprise, the practicability of transporting certain mail by airplane, the house of representatives excises from the appropriation bill the allotment for airmail service. Unless the senate restores the item, this new and valuable feature of the postal service will be temporarily abandoned.

To the public the unfriendly action of the house is a disappointment. There is a large amount of postal matter which should be transported as speedily as possible, and in quantity it is sufficient to maintain the airmail service without loss, or nearly so. The airplane passenger lines which are operated in Europe and across the Mediterranean, between Europe and Africa, prove that air transportation is a fact.

Ever since the department decided to try out the airmail service there has been opposition to the innovation. Why, news from Washington does not imply. We are left to conjecture the cause and source of this antagonism. The postoffice department should have the cooperation of congress in its attempt to be modern. It is plain to see that the airmail service will be a phase of postal transportation, and the department should be encouraged in developing it.

FANTASIES

Don't stop the boy from dreaming.

Don't clip his visions' wings;

He'll have enough of scheming

And hard, material things

When life's harsh hands have clutched him

And care has lined his brow.

Be glad a spell has touched him.

Be glad he's dreaming now.

Don't spoil his fond illusion

Of magic hopes and fair.

Don't scatter in confusion

His castles of the air.

You'll only see him grieving

For what you take away.

So let him go on weaving

His fancies while he may.

Some say his mood is enchanted.

For wise men know the truth.

That growth and change are planted

First in the dreams of youth.

Don't let his fancies gleaming

Be snuffed out by the day.

Don't stop the boy from dreaming—

His dreams will make the man.

Always new inventions in a collage of life. It's like a man making the railroad line.

The difference between a dream and a nightmare is that a dream is a picture of a thing that is to be.

Remember that the only way to get a thing done is to do it.

Don't think that the only way to get a thing done is to do it.

BLACKHEADS AND PIMPLES

Young people with blackheads (comedones) and pimples (acne) have as rich and pure blood as young people without any skin trouble, and there is no reason to believe that constipation, the character of the diet, or any other habits are accountable for the annoying condition. Blackheads are oil glands (pores) obstructed by the natural oil of the skin (sebum) and more or less dust and debris. Pimples are produced by the infection of such obstructed oil gland ducts by the ordinary pus-producing germs which are always present on the healthiest and cleanest skin.

Diet, the regulation of the bowels by the use of proper food, and general hygiene are no more important in the treatment of acne than in the treatment of other minor ailments.

Pastry, greasy foods, sweets, etc., have been excluded from the diet by good old doctors from away back yonder for what reason and to what purpose nobody knows. And it is an unfailing ability to suggest that the "child's blood needs purifying"—the what that means, heaven only knows. Some of the purest, most perfect blood I have ever gazed at came from the veins of healthy young people with acne.

Tanning or mild sunburn is one of the best remedies for acne, especially when combined with local antiseptic measures. Each pustule should be opened after touching it with iodine, by picking it with a needle which has just been flamed to sterilize it. The pus should be gently squeezed out, and forcible pressure avoided. The face should then be bathed for several minutes with very hot water in which boracic acid powder is dissolved, tablespoonful in the quart. Following this, if possible, a sunbath of 5 to 20 minutes. All this may be repeated every two or three days.

At night a little 1 per cent ointment of ammoniated mercury may be gently rubbed in around each sore pimple, or the whole face bathed with this lotion which is to dry out.

Sulphate of zinc..... 1/2 ounce

Rose water..... 2 ounces

Mix. Then add

Sulphuretted potash..... 1/2 ounce

Rose water..... 2 ounces

In chronic cases of acne X-ray treatment is often curative. In any case a course of vaccine treatment, preferably vaccines prepared from the germs present in the individual case, is worth trying. The effect of vaccine treatment is slow—it manifests some weeks after the injections. The ultra-violet rays, Finster, Kromayer or Alpine light is about as effective as the X-ray.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Autointoxication

Kindly give us old fellows a writeup on autointoxication. We've been having quite a discussion about it. One doctor prescribes a teaspoonful of sodium phosphate in hot water every morning. I see by your writeups you do not approve of dope. (C. F.)

Answer.—Sodium phosphate is not dope. It is a salt cathartic, having an effect identical with that of the other kinds of salts. What I understand as "autointoxication" has no relation to the physiologic question. Perhaps the patient for whom the doctor prescribed sodium phosphate needed such medicine. I do approve of "dope" when it is necessary. I have no doubts about the efficacy of drugs, intelligently used. Of course I can't prescribe drugs intelligently for persons I have not examined. That is the main reason why I don't prescribe for you. As I have often said, autointoxication is a theory, not a condition. The theory has never been satisfactorily proved; that is, no one has been able to identify the poison or poisons which are assumed to be formed or retained in the blood (not in the bowels) in autointoxication. In any case it is merely a feature of the illness, not an illness in itself.

COMPENSATION INSURANCE RATES GO UP 15 PER CENT

A uniform increase of 15 per cent in the rates of workmen's compensation in Wisconsin was authorized by the Wisconsin compensation insurance board. It was announced today. The increase becomes effective May 15. All policies issued on and after May 15 will be written on the basis of the new rates.

The board points out that for the protection of employees and beneficiaries under the compensation law, rates must be adequate, and that in the establishment of a rate level, past experience must be the guide.

On account of the large increase in the number and severity of industrial accidents during the past three years, this rate increase was made necessary. Any reductions in insurance cost can be made possible if employees will make greater efforts along safety lines for the reduction of accidents in their plants, the board declared.

LETTER FROM PRISCILLA BRADFORD TO JOHN ALDEN

PRESCOTT

MR. JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT.

Dear sir: I have meditated a long time before I have come to the conclusion that I should write you a letter.

Your heart-broken mother showed me the terrible misdeed you had done, and after reading it, if you had said nothing about me, I would still say to you that nothing could make it possible for me to link my life with yours.

In my sheltered life I had not dreamed that it was really true that any male creature could be so cruel. I cannot understand why you have mistaken the sweet regard and gentle friendship existing between myself and your mother as a bid for your favor.

Perhaps you will not believe me when I tell you I cannot conceive that such an unfeeling human being could live.

Your mother at the present moment is under the care of a doctor. She has not stopped weeping since she received your letter. She moans and cries all the time.

I am not writing this to elicit any sympathy from you. I am only stating a fact.

I have told her now is the time to cast you off and that if she can believe her maternal emotions in the end she will be much better and live to thank me for this advice.

I hardly know, however, what she is going to do in the future for after the insulting letter you have written about me to her I cannot still stay with her and keep my self-respect.

This decision on my part, I think, is worrying her more than all that you have said to her.

However, my resolution is made. I am moving out tomorrow, although the doctor has begged me to stay. He says he will not answer for the consequences if I do.

If your mother passes away because of this her death will be on your head.

PRISCILLA BRADFORD.

• Night Letter to Doctor Elmer Knox From John Alden •

• Prescott •

See that Priscilla Bradford leaves my mother's house immediately. Install trained nurse if necessary. Is mother's old cook still with her? If not, see that she has a reliable housekeeper. Let me know immediately if she is in any danger. If I can do anything for her will take next train. Think, however, in her present state of mind I had better stay away. Do everything that is needed.

WISCONSIN-AVE IS TO BE PAVED WITH NEW TYPE CONCRETE

No Complaints Are Made Against Assessment of Benefits and Damages

Kaukauna—Final arrangements for the paving of Wisconsin-ave with vibro-rolled concrete were made at an adjourned meeting of the common council Friday evening in the council chambers. A resolution was adopted accepting the original report of the board of public works in which assessments for benefits and damages were made on the various property owners on Wisconsin-ave which accrued through the alteration of grades in preparing for paving. The report was adopted as originally presented as no property owners appeared to register a complaint after being given ample opportunity to do so.

Another resolution was adopted requiring the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power Co. to pave its street car tracks on Wisconsin-ave from the west line of Lawrence to the west line of Diederich. The work must be started within 20 days after publication of the resolution.

Work on Wisconsin-ave will not be started until the traction company has completed its paving. As a result the work probably will be delayed two weeks or more. It is quite probable that the construction company will begin work on Dodge-st in the meantime.

SO BIG

By Edna Ferber

"What time is it, Celeste?"
"It is now eleven o'clock, madame."
"Is that all?"
"Would madame like that I prepare her bath now, or later?"
"Later Celeste. My chocolate now."

"My letters. And if it is the conjunction of the stars..."

Early in the winter Selma had had the unfortunate idea of opening the ice-locked windows at intervals and giving the children five minutes of exercise while the fresh cold air cleared the brains and room at once. Arms waved wildly, heads bobbed, short legs worked vigorously. At the end of the week twenty High Prairie parents sent protests by note or word of mouth. Jan and Cornelius, Katrina and Aggie went to school to learn reading and writing and numbers, not to stand with open windows in the winter.

On the Pool farm the winter work had set in. Klaas drove into Chicago with winter vegetables only once a week now. He and Jakob and Roelf were storing potatoes and cabbages, undergirding, repairing fences, preparing frames for early spring planting, sorting seedlings. It had been Roelf who taught Selma to build the schoolhouse fire. He had gone with her on that first morning, had started the fire, filled the water pail, initiated her in the rites of corn-cobs, kerosene, and dampers. A shy, dark, silent boy. She set out deliberately to woo him to friendship.

"Roelf, I have a book called 'Tran-loc.' Would you like to read it?"

"Well, I don't get much time."

"You wouldn't have to hurry. Right there in the house. And there's another called 'The Three Musketeers'."

He was trying not to look pleased; to appear stolid and Dutch, like the people from whom he had sprung. Some Dutch, some English, some French, thought or fisherman, must have touched at an Italian port or Spanish and brought back a wife whose eyes and skin and feeling for beauty had skipped layer on layer of placid Netherlands to crop out now in this wretched sensitive boy.

Selma had spoken to Jakob Hoogendunk about a shelf for her books and her photographs. He had put up a rough bit of board, very crude and ugly, but it had done the trick.

She came home one snowy afternoon to find this shelf gone and in its place a smooth and polished one, with brackets intricately carved. Roelf had cut, planed, polished, and carved it in many hours of work in the cold little shed off the kitchen. He had there a workshop of sorts, fitted with such tools and implements as he could devise. He did most of his work on the farm, but often at night Selma could faintly hear the rasp of his hand saw after he had gone to bed. He had built a doll's house for Geertje and Josina that was the black envy of every child in High Prairie. This sort of thing was looked upon by Klaas Pool as foolishness. Roelf's real work in the shed was the making and mending of collars and neckties for the early spring plants. Whenever possible Roelf neglected this dull work for some fancy of his own. To this Klaas Pool objected as being "dumb." For this matter, High Prairie considered Pool's boy "dumb like." He said such things when the new Dutch Reformed church was completed after eleven years of effort—red brick, and the first brick church in High Prairie—bright yellow painted pews—a red and white glass window, most handsome—the Reverend Veenwerk brought from New Haarlem to preach the first sermon—Pool's Roelf was heard to hint darkly to a group of High Prairie boys that some night he was going to burn the church down. It was ugly to hurt you to look at it, just.

Certainly the boy was different. Selma, none too known to herself, still recognized that there was something rare, something precious to be fostered, shielded, encouraged.

"Roelf, stop that foolishness, get your ma once some wood. Carving on that box again instead of finishing them goldframes. Some day, by golly, I show you, I break every stick.....

dumb as a Groningen.....

Roelf did not sulk. He seemed not to mind, particularly. But he came back to the carved box as soon as chance presented itself. Maartje and Klaas Pool were not cruel people nor unkind. They were a little bewildered by this odd creature that they, inexplicably enough, had produced. It was not a family given to demonstration of affection. Life was to grim for the flowering of this softer side. Then, too, they had sprung from phlegmatic and unemotional people. Klaas toiled like a slave in the fields and barn; Maartje's day was a treadmill of cooking, scrubbing, washing, mending from the moment she arose (four in the summer, five in the winter) until she dropped with a groan in her bed often later after the others were asleep. Selma had never seen him kiss Geertje or Josina. But once she had been a trifle startled to see Maartje on one of her countless trips between stove and table, run her hand through the boy's shock of black hair, down the side of his face to his chin, which she tipped up with an in-teresting, tender gesture, as she looked down into him. It was a movement, fleeting, vague, yet definitely compassionate. Sometimes she even remembered when Klaas berated Roelf, "Leave the boy be, then. Klaas, leave him be, once."

"She loves him best," Selma thought. "She'd even try to understand him if she had time."

Life was reading her bones with hunger as to cause her to wonder if her stock would last him the winter. Sometimes, after supper, when he was hammering and sawing away in the little shed Selma would snatch Maartje's shawl off the hook, and swathed in this against draughty things, she would read aloud to him while he carved, or talk to him above the noise of his tools. Selma was a day-dreamer, a fantasist. She loved to make this boy laugh. His dark face would flash into almost dazzling animation. Sometimes Maartje, hearing their young laughter, would come to the shed door and stand there a moment, hugging her arms in her rolled apron and smiling at them, uncomprehending but companionable.

"You make fun, hm?"

"Come in, Mrs. Pool. Sit down on my box and make fun, too. Here you may have half the shawl."

"Oh Heien! I got no time to sit down." She was off.

Roelf said his plans slowly, more slowly, over the surface of a satin-smooth oak board. He stopped, twined a curl of shavings about his finger. "When I am a man, and earn a silk, I am going to buy my mother a silk dress like I saw in a store in Chicago and she should put it on every day, not only for Sunday, but sit in a chair and make little fine stitches like Widow Paarlensers."

"What else are you going to do when you grow up?" She asked, certain that he would say something de-licious.

"Drive the team to town alone to market."

"Oh, Roelf!"

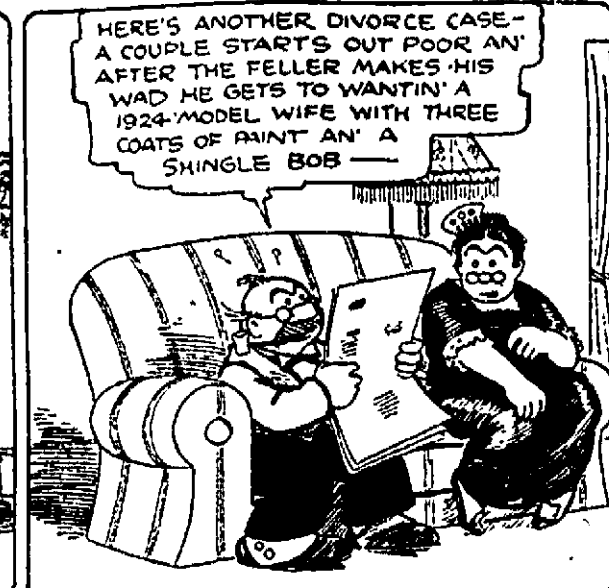

"Sure. Already I have gone five times—twice with Jakob and three times with Pop. Pretty soon, when I am seventeen or eighteen, I can go alone. At five in the afternoon you start and at nine you are in the Hay market. There all night you sleep on the wagon. There are no lights. The man play dice and cards. At four in the morning you are ready when her comes, the commission men and the peddlers and the grocer men. Oh, it's fine, I tell you."

"Roelf!" She was bitterly disap-pointed.
